

Assumptions, gaps & corrections carried into this edition

Two-session catch-up: no edition was produced for the Wed 26 Aug cutoff on its normal schedule (the last logged edition, #7, covers only through Mon 24 Aug). Cause unconfirmed - the scheduler's trigger record shows a single fire early Wed 26 Aug ICT, well after the intended slot, but no completed edition exists for that date; a session failure or non-delivered run is the likelier explanation than a missed fire. This edition therefore covers both Tue 25 Aug and Wed 26 Aug in full: Wednesday (most recent, incl. Nvidia's print) at full depth, Tuesday at condensed catch-up depth, per house protocol for multi-session gaps. Corrections: Monday 24 Aug's VIX close is revised to 15.85 (was 15.90 in edition 7 - three independent sources agree on 15.85). The "approx. 2.8% historical average realized move" figure used for Nvidia options context since edition 4 could not be corroborated this edition - two independent options-analytics sources instead put Nvidia's actual median/average post-earnings move at approx. 7.4% over the last 8-12 quarters; that figure replaces 2.8% below and should be treated as the reliable baseline going forward. Standing facts re-verified fresh, unchanged: Fed Chair is Kevin Warsh (confirmed via federalreserve.gov); Jackson Hole runs Thu-Sat 27-29 Aug with Warsh's first keynote as Chair Fri 28 Aug approx. 10:00am ET (KC Fed, MNI) - symposium opens today but no remarks had occurred as of this edition's cutoff. Unresolved admin item, flagged for a third edition: the scheduled task's own stored prompt still instructs a GitHub/Telegram delivery step that Alex retired on 17 Aug in favor of in-session delivery only. This session is updating the trigger's stored prompt directly to remove that stale instruction.

60-second read

- 1. Nvidia beat and raised again - Q2 revenue $96.2bn (+106% y/y) vs. $92.07bn consensus, EPS $2.22 vs. $2.09, data-center revenue $89.0bn (+117% y/y), gross margin 75.0%; Q3 guide $108bn (±2%), above the Street's $104bn view^[1]. Shares whipsawed after-hours (-1.3% → +5% → settling near +4.7% to $219.53 by 7:59pm ET^[2]) - a smaller reaction than the approx. 5.5-6% weekly-options-implied move^[3], but roughly in line with Nvidia's own historical average earnings-day swing (approx. 7.4%, corrected this edition, see box above).
- 2. Dick's Sporting Goods had its worst session in years - closed -30.7% to $124.32 Tuesday on an EPS/revenue miss and a steep FY guidance cut, as the Foot Locker integration ran an operating loss and gross margin fell 228bps^[4]; the read-across hit footwear/apparel sentiment broadly.
- 3. Software earnings were a bright spot - CrowdStrike (+11.7% after-hours on a beat-and-raise^[5]) and Salesforce (+11.4% after-hours, helped by a $2.6bn mark-to-market gain on its Anthropic stake alongside in-line operating results^[6]) both jumped Wednesday night, while Zoom fell approx. 6.5% on soft Q3 guidance^[7].
- 4. July PCE ran hot, GDP held steady - headline PCE +3.7% y/y (vs. 3.6% expected), core +3.3% y/y (in line); Q2 GDP's second estimate was unrevised at +1.5% annualized^[8]. Yields and the dollar firmed modestly on the inflation surprise, reversing an early rally in gold, which fell 1.4% off session highs near $4,730^[9].
- 5. Oil extended its slide for a third session - WTI -4.7% Tuesday and a further -0.3% Wednesday, Brent down in both sessions, as Hormuz de-escalation chatter unwound the war premium built up earlier in August^[10]; copper spiked to a fresh intraday Comex record above $6.77/lb Wednesday before easing back on a cooling London squeeze^[11].

1. Market recap

S&P 500 (Wed) 7,675.70 -0.02%	Dow (Wed) 53,463.88 -0.21%	Nasdaq Comp (Wed) 26,130.20 -0.08%	Russell 2000 (Wed) 3,005.90 -0.14%	VIX (Tue, latest avail.) 15.45 -2.52%
--	---	---	---	--

Both sessions were quiet at the index level relative to the news flow underneath. Tuesday (S&P +0.3%, Dow +0.3%, Nasdaq +0.7%, Russell +0.5%^[12]) was lifted by a second straight day of falling oil prices easing bond-market anxiety, even as Dick's Sporting Goods dropped a third of its market cap intraday. Wednesday (S&P -0.02%, Dow -0.21%, Nasdaq -0.08%, Russell -0.14%^[1]) was a wait-and-see session ahead of Nvidia's 5pm ET print, nudged lower by the hotter-than-expected PCE read; AP described it as "a quiet day of trading"^[1]. VIX fell to 15.45 Tuesday (a second straight decline, contango intact); Wednesday's close was not yet published by any tracked source at this edition's approx. 8:15pm ET cutoff and is carried to Annex A^[13].

2. Equities and earnings

Wednesday 26 Aug (full session + after-hours) - the week's dominant catalyst

Nvidia (NVDA) reported Q2 FY2027 results after Wednesday's close: revenue $96.2bn (+106% y/y), beating the $92.07bn consensus by approx. 4.5%; data-center revenue $89.0bn (+117% y/y, +18.3% q/q); adjusted EPS $2.22 vs. $2.09 expected; gross margin 75.0% vs. 72.7% a year ago^[1]. Q3 guidance of $108bn (±2%) implies approx. 89% y/y growth and came in above BofA's $107-108bn model and the approx. $104bn Street consensus^[1]. Management disclosed $366bn in multiyear AI-infrastructure commitments and up to $108.5bn of maximum guarantee exposure, mostly tied to memory procurement^[1]. CEO Jensen Huang: "compute is revenue, and demand is accelerating." The stock closed the regular session -1.59% at $209.66 (pre-earnings), then swung after-hours from -1.3% immediately on the release to +5% about 30 minutes into the call, settling around +4.7% at $219.53 by 7:59pm ET^[2] - below the approx. 5.5-6.0% weekly-options-implied move^[3] but close to the corrected approx. 7.4% historical-average print-day swing (see disclosure box). Read-across was mixed and thinly sourced by the cutoff: AMD firmed modestly (+1.15%) on a same-day BMO Outperform initiation citing its Helios AI rack^[14]; a Micron after-hours gain was reported but not independently confirmed with a percentage^[15].

CrowdStrike (CRWD) beat on both lines - revenue $1.47bn (+25.8% y/y, +2.1% vs. consensus), adjusted EPS $0.31 vs. $0.29 - and raised full-year revenue guidance to a $6.00bn midpoint; ARR reached $5.84bn (+25.4% y/y). Shares jumped +11.7% to $207.46 after hours^[5]. Salesforce (CRM) revenue of $11.35bn (+10.8%) was in line, but non-GAAP EPS of $5.90 was inflated by a $2.6bn mark-to-market gain on its Anthropic equity stake, which pushed net income to $3.53bn from $1.89bn a year ago; full-year revenue guidance was raised to $46.1-46.4bn and Agentforce ARR passed $1.5bn (+240% y/y). Shares rose +11.4% to approx. $230.44 in extended trading^[6]. Zoom (ZM) beat on revenue and EPS but issued soft Q3 profit guidance and fell approx. 6.5%^[7]; other collaboration-software names were reported to slip in sympathy, unconfirmed with specifics. Dycom Industries (DY), a telecom-infrastructure contractor, beat the current quarter but guided Q3 EPS below consensus and fell -11.1% to $312.85^[16].

In consumer discretionary: Abercrombie & Fitch (ANF) posted sales +5% y/y to $1.3bn and net income of $185.5mn ($4.17/share, vs. $2.91/share a year ago), aided by roughly $100mn in tariff refunds, and raised full-year guidance; shares closed +37% to $149.26^[17]. Kohl's (KSS) beat on earnings and raised guidance, also helped by a approx. $150mn tariff refund, but sales missed on cautious consumer spending; shares fell approx. 6% despite the beat-and-raise^[18]. Meta Platforms traded volatile but closed little-changed after settling a $17bn child-safety dispute with multiple states^[19]. No official closing 11-sector table was obtainable for Wednesday; informal intraday color (Investrade) showed semiconductors, solar-adjacent names and apparel among the session's early leaders, with software and defense among the laggards^[20].

Tuesday 25 Aug (condensed catch-up)

Dick's Sporting Goods (DKS) was the session's defining story: non-GAAP EPS of $3.53 and revenue of approx. $5.6bn both missed consensus (approx. $3.76 / approx. $5.64bn), and full-year EPS guidance was slashed to roughly $11-12 from $13.27-14.27 previously. GAAP earnings fell approx. 26% y/y despite sales +53.2% y/y (Foot Locker-driven), because the Foot Locker segment ran a pro forma comp of -3.6% and a $31.9mn operating loss; consolidated operating margin fell from 12.4% to 7.9%, gross margin -228bps, and inventory rose 63% y/y to $5.57bn. Shares closed -30.7% at $124.32 on 1,807% of average volume - the stock's worst session in years^[4], and pressured footwear/apparel sentiment into Wednesday.

Elsewhere Tuesday: PDD Holdings reported Q2 revenue +8% y/y to $16.7bn (in line) and adjusted net income -13% y/y; ADSs slipped approx. 1.5% on a "tepid" print^[21]. No confirmed Monday-dated moves for Coinbase or MARA Holdings were locatable this edition despite a targeted search; that open thread from edition 7 remains unresolved and is dropped rather than guessed at.

3. Macro, policy and rates

Wednesday brought the week's two heaviest US data prints. Q2 GDP, second estimate: +1.5% annualized, unrevised from the advance figure and matching consensus; consumer spending was revised up to +3.4% (from +3.2%), offset by a larger drag from imports^[8]. July PCE, the Fed's preferred inflation gauge: headline +0.2% m/m / +3.7% y/y (hotter than the 3.6% consensus); core +0.2% m/m / +3.3% y/y (in line)^[9]. July durable goods orders rose +1.1% headline (vs. +0.5% expected, a beat) but +0.4% ex-transport (vs. +0.6% expected, a miss)^[22]. Treasury yields firmed modestly on the hot headline PCE read: 10-year approx. 4.65-4.66%, 2-year approx. 4.22%, 30-year approx. 5.17% (secondary-market levels; the official par-yield curve lags a day)^[23]. No FOMC speakers were scheduled either day, consistent with the run-up to Jackson Hole.

Tuesday's data was uniformly soft: Conference Board Consumer Confidence fell to 89.4 (vs. 90.2 expected), a seven-month low, driven by a sharp drop in the expectations sub-index; Richmond Fed manufacturing fell to +4 (vs. +7 expected, down from +5); Case-Shiller's June report showed home-price growth accelerating (national index +1.5% y/y, 20-city +2.1% y/y); and new home sales fell 10.5% m/m to 607,000 annualized, below the approx. 620,000 consensus^[24]. None of this data was cited by market commentary as the session's primary driver - that was the second straight day of falling oil (below).

On trade and geopolitics: the US-Canada trade talks that collapsed around 22 Aug remain unresolved; Canada's retaliatory tariffs are set to take effect 8 Sept, with the dollar value of the underlying US tariff (reported variously as approx. $20bn and approx. $28bn across editions) still not fully reconciled^[25]. Treasury Secretary Bessent's "Operation Economic Outcast" Iran sanctions package, unveiled 24 Aug, targets oil-revenue networks routed through the UAE, Hong Kong, China, Singapore, Switzerland and Europe; Bessent explicitly declined to set effective dates for secondary sanctions on major counterparties, citing a wish to avoid destabilizing markets^[26]. Fed Chair Kevin Warsh and the Jackson Hole Symposium's Thu-Sat 27-29 Aug dates were both re-verified fresh against primary sources this edition and are unchanged (see disclosure box).

4. Commodities and FX

Oil fell for a third consecutive session as Iran/Oman talk of reopening Hormuz-adjacent shipping lanes continued to unwind the war premium built up earlier in August. WTI settled $80.98 Tuesday (-4.7%) and $80.78 Wednesday (-0.3%)^[27]; a cluster of intraday vendor quotes Wednesday ranged as high as $82.23, wider dispersion than usual and flagged in Annex A. Brent settled $87.27 Tuesday (-3.6%) and $85.29 Wednesday (-2.3%)^[28]. Gold reversed hard Wednesday: up as much as 0.5% intraday and testing $4,730 in the morning before the hot PCE print flipped it to a -1.4% close at $4,591.70; Tuesday it closed roughly flat (+0.05% to $4,653.40) as softer data and lower yields offset profit-taking after a approx. 7% five-session run^[9]. Silver eased both days (Tue -0.5% to $68.47, Wed -0.8% to $68.00)^[9].

Copper was the standout: a fresh intraday Comex record of $6.7775/lb Wednesday morning (topping the prior 12 Aug $6.7140 reference) before easing back to $6.6070 (-1.6% intraday) as a London backwardation squeeze showed signs of cooling; Tuesday's session also touched a marginal new intraday high ($6.7270) before closing $6.7125^[29]. Tariff front-running (US copper duties phase in from 2027) and continued LME-stock drawdowns remain the underlying support. The dollar firmed on Wednesday's hot PCE print (DXY tracking toward 99.25-99.40 resistance, exact close unconfirmed by cutoff) after drifting near three-month lows Tuesday (approx. 99.0)^[30]. EUR/USD eased to $1.1654 (-0.18%) Wednesday from approx. 1.1675 Tuesday; GBP/USD fell further below 1.3620 (-0.37%) after failing resistance at 1.3660; USD/JPY firmed modestly both days (approx. 159.4 Wednesday); USD/CAD rose to 1.3871 (+0.25%) Wednesday from 1.3839, with the active US-Canada tariff dispute cited explicitly as a driver alongside a widening US-Canada yield spread^[30].

5. Derivatives, volatility and positioning

VIX fell to 15.45 Tuesday (-2.5%, second straight decline); Wednesday's close had not been published by any tracked source as of this edition's cutoff and is listed in Annex A rather than estimated. Monday 24 Aug's close is corrected to 15.85 (was reported 15.90 in edition 7); VIX/VIX3M ratio stood at 0.854 (contango) as of Monday, single-sourced^[13]. Options positioning into Nvidia's print showed a weekly at-the-money straddle implying a approx. 5.5-6.0% move (calls outnumbering puts roughly 5:3), against a monthly (18 Sept) straddle pricing 8.66% - different tenors, not directly comparable^[3]. As flagged in the disclosure box, the "approx. 2.8% historical average" figure carried in prior editions could not be corroborated this edition; two independent options-analytics sources instead show Nvidia's median/average post-earnings move at approx. 7.4% over the trailing 8-12 quarters, which we now treat as the reliable baseline^[3]. Single-sourced dealer-positioning color (SpotGamma) described dealers as short gamma to the upside with $220 as a key level and heavy call open interest at the $230/$240 strikes for the 28 Aug expiry - directional color only, not exchange-verified^[31].

No fresh CFTC Commitment of Traders data falls in this window - the report covering positioning as of Tue 25 Aug is due Friday 28 Aug per the standard Friday-release, prior-Tuesday-data cadence; edition 7's 18 Aug figures are not repeated here per house practice^[32]. Funding was unremarkable: SOFR printed 3.66% for 25 Aug (published 26 Aug with the usual one-day lag); ON RRP award rate held at 3.50% with de minimis take-up (approx. $0.40bn); the Fed's H.4.1 balance sheet (release dated 20 Aug, data as of 19 Aug) showed reserves approx. $2.935tn, TGA approx. $953.6bn, total assets approx. $6.746tn, with the next release due Thursday 27 Aug, outside this window^[33].

Fri 28 Aug, 3:30pm ET	CFTC CoT (data as of 25 Aug)	-

Sector setup we take into Thursday:

- Software/SaaS carries the week's best sentiment after CrowdStrike and Salesforce's after-hours pops; Zoom's guidance miss is a reminder the bar is high for anything short of a clean beat-and-raise.
- AI/semis face a binary-ish read-through from Nvidia's settling-around-+4.7% reaction - a beat-and-raise that undershot the options-implied move but landed near the stock's own historical average swing; watch AMD, Broadcom and Micron at Thursday's open for confirmation of read-across that could not be cleanly sourced Wednesday night.
- Retail/apparel is split down the middle - Abercrombie's tariff-refund-aided beat vs. Dick's Sporting Goods' integration-driven collapse - underscoring that guidance quality, not just the tariff-refund tailwind every retailer is now citing, is what's separating winners from losers this earnings season.
- Rates-sensitive sectors face a heavier debt-servicing/FX cross-current into Friday's Warsh keynote, with the hot PCE print already nudging the curve higher and USD/CAD explicitly trading the widening tariff dispute.

Annex A - Could not verify / left unresolved this edition

- VIX numeric close, Wednesday 26 Aug - not published by any tracked source as of approx. 8:15pm ET cutoff.
- VIX3M and VVIX for both Tuesday and Wednesday (only Monday's ratio/VVIX sourced, single-sourced at that).
- VIX9D / VIX6M for any day this window - known persistent gap, endpoints gated.
- Official CME/ICE exchange-settlement prints for WTI, Brent, gold, silver, copper, nat gas - vendor snapshots used throughout, disclosed inline.
- Exact WTI Wednesday settlement - vendor cluster ranged $80.21-$82.23; $80.78 (Investing.com historical table) used as the most session-final-oriented figure.
- Platinum, Wednesday 26 Aug - no dated figure located (Tuesday $1,880.78 was sourced).
- DXY exact closing print, both days - directional moves sourced, no single clean close located.
- USD/MXN, Tuesday 25 Aug; nat gas settlement, Tuesday 25 Aug - no dated figures located.
- Official 11-sector GICS closing table and closing market breadth, both sessions - persistent known gap; only intraday/informal color used.
- Official CME FedWatch September FOMC probabilities - page blocks automated access; secondary trackers cited instead (Kalshi/Polymarket-style approx. 67% hold/32% hike; a CME-sourced secondary citation approx. 60%/40%) and disclosed as a range.
- Core capital goods (nondefense ex-aircraft), July - a Haver Analytics extraction conflicted sharply with Census primary data and was discarded; no reliable figure obtained.
- Dealer gamma / GEX and ODTE volume around Nvidia's print - single third-party source (SpotGamma) only, reported as directional color, not fact.
- Final, settled Nvidia after-hours move - still evolving at cutoff (7:59pm ET read of +4.7% used); Thursday's regular-session open was not observable in this window.
- Confirmed Monday 24 Aug moves for Coinbase and MARA Holdings - open thread from edition 7, remains unresolved despite a targeted search this edition.
- Micron's exact after-hours percentage move tied to Nvidia's print - reported directionally higher by one source, no percentage corroborated.
- Exact US-tariff dollar figure on Canadian goods (approx. $20bn vs. approx. $28bn across editions) - not reconciled this edition either.
